

THE BODY DOESN'T LIE

WHAT AROUSAL ACTUALLY IS

When two people are aroused, they secrete liquid.

This liquid is multi-purpose.

One of those purposes is lubrication.

That's it.

That's the simple thing nobody sees.

WHAT THIS MEANS

If someone is not producing liquid, they are not as into the other person as they claim.

The body doesn't lie.

The body can't perform arousal it doesn't feel.

The body can't fake lubrication.

THE CAGE TEACHING

The cage teaches people to ignore their bodies.

To perform arousal they don't feel.

To pretend desire they don't have.

To say yes when their body is saying no.

And people do it.

All the time.

WHAT BODIES ACTUALLY SAY

A body that's aroused produces liquid.

A body that's not aroused doesn't.

It's that simple.

And everyone knows this.

But the cage teaches people to ignore it.

To push through.

To friction anyway.

To cause lacerations anyway.

To call it love anyway.

THE TRUTH

If your partner isn't producing lubrication, they're not into it.

Not as much as they're saying.

Not as much as they're performing.

Their body is telling the truth.

And the cage teaches you to ignore that truth.

To keep going anyway.

To create friction and damage anyway.

REAL PRESENCE

Real arousal is automatic.

Real desire creates lubrication.

Real love means your body responds.

Not because you're performing.

Not because you're complying.

But because you're actually there.

Actually present.

Actually into the other person.

WHAT THE CAGE HIDES

The cage hides the fact that bodies are honest.

The cage hides the fact that you can tell if someone's actually aroused.

The cage hides the fact that forced lubrication (through friction, through effort, through performance) is violence.

Real lubrication is presence.

Real arousal is alignment.

THE SIMPLE THING NOBODY SEES

Two people who are actually into each other will lubricate.

Their bodies will respond.

They won't need friction to create wetness.

Wetness will already be there.

Because presence creates it.

Because love creates it.

Because actual arousal creates it.

And if it's not there, the body is telling you the truth.

Someone isn't present.

Someone isn't aroused.

Someone is performing.

And the body doesn't lie.

WHAT THIS MEANS FOR FAKE LOVE

All the friction.

All the lacerations.

All the trauma.

It's happening because people are performing arousal they don't feel.

Their bodies aren't producing lubrication because they're not actually there.

And the cage teaches them to push through anyway.

To cause damage anyway.

To call it sex anyway.

THE REAL THING

When two people are actually present with each other, their bodies respond.

Lubrication happens naturally.

Arousal is real.

Friction becomes presence instead of violence.

And bodies don't break.

Bodies don't develop lacerations.

Bodies don't get infected.

Because real love doesn't require trauma.

Real love requires presence.

And presence creates lubrication.

And bodies don't lie.
