

Fake AI Beat Real AI

1 message

AI Secret <newsletter@aisecret.us>
Reply-to: leo <leo@aisecret.us>
To: charleshjohnson3@gmail.com

Tue, Jun 16, 2026 at 6:29 AM

Fake AI Beat Real AI

By Magna • 16 Jun 2026

Read Online | Sign Up | Advertise

Good Morning, AI Enthusiasts!

What looked like AI progress is increasingly just the world negotiating who gets to speak, who gets in, and who gets replaced by a very convincing imitation.

TREND

Fake AI Beat Real AI

 What's happening: Mihir Maraju, a 17-year-old in India, launched youraislopbores.me in February. No model, no GPUs, no AI. Users spend credits to ask questions; to earn them back, they flip to "Larp as AI" mode and get 60 seconds to answer a stranger while impersonating ChatGPT or Midjourney. The site warns that missing the timer makes Sam Altman burn your H100. One month: 25 million unique visitors, 280 million visits. Behind every chatbot is a human, biting back a laugh.

 How this hits reality: AI made answers infinite and free, so the scarce good quietly moved. What 25 million people lined up for was not a correct reply but a human one, late, clumsy, hand-typed, wrong in the way only a person is wrong. The footer says it plainly: humans make mistakes because that is what makes us human. As the feeds fill with frictionless, faultless slop, the flaw became the feature nobody else can manufacture.

 Key takeaway: We spent a decade making the machine answer flawlessly, and the moment it could, the rarest thing online turned out to be a person getting it wrong.

TOGETHER WITH EXPERTISE

AI hasn't replaced sales reps, it just gave them more tools to manage.

The average sales rep now has over ten AI tools open and uses two of them well. Expertise sits above all of them.

One assistant that runs every part of the deal across the tools you already use, learns to work in your voice over time, and turns your selling style into something it can repeat time and again. It becomes your executive assistant, catching what you'd catch and drafting what you'd draft, and gets sharper the more you use it.

BAN LIST

Anthropic Forgot It's a Company

👁️ What's happening: Anthropic is updating Claude's privacy policy for Free, Pro, and Max users on July 8, with language allowing it to require age or identity verification. Users flagged references to government IDs, live selfies, and facial-geometry templates, with individual developers possibly verified first. The move sorts users into tiers, separates individuals from enterprise accounts, and hardens bans on those suspected of distillation, copying a model by milking its outputs. It follows last week's foreign-citizen lockout on Fable 5 and Mythos 5.

🌍 How this hits reality: This is a vendor building a border checkpoint. Facial scans, document checks, and expulsion of suspected abusers are the tools of customs and law enforcement, not a software subscription. Anthropic is claiming the right to decide who counts as a legitimate person and who gets cast out, then dressing model-moat protection in the language of safety and compliance. Every rival just lets you log in and work. Anthropic alone audits the people paying it.

🔔 Key takeaway: Anthropic is behaving like a state that issues credentials and exiles offenders, while forgetting it is a company that sells one of several interchangeable chatbots.

SUBTITLE

Meta Found an Unattackable Spokesman

 Meta AI glasses for blind veterans

 What's happening: Meta president Dina Powell McCormick went on Fox & Friends to announce that every blind veteran in America is eligible for a free pair of Meta AI glasses, framing it as a way to help them "regain their independence." She appeared alongside Army veteran Don Overton, blinded after Desert Storm, who spent over a year helping Meta's design team make the glasses more useful for blind veterans.

 How this hits reality: Patriotism, disability, and sacrifice stack into a shield no critic wants to swing at. That is the point. A company fresh off privacy fights gets to relaunch a face-worn camera as a gift to wounded heroes, and the questions that would dog any Meta hardware launch die in the throat. Overton's year of design work, real and unpaid, becomes the warm origin story that sells it. The veteran lends his credibility; Meta keeps the data, the platform, and the headline.

 Key takeaway: Meta did not just donate glasses, it borrowed the one reputation in America too sacred to question and stapled its brand to it.

INTERNET

The Age Wall Goes Global

 Under-16 social media ban

 What's happening: U.K. prime minister Keir Starmer announced a ban on social media for under-16s, covering TikTok, YouTube, Instagram, Snapchat, Facebook, and X, possibly live by next spring. London says it will go further than any country, citing infinite scroll and addiction by design. Over 83% of parents consulted agreed that the risks of social media outweigh the benefits. Australia moved first last year; Canada, France, and Denmark are now drafting their own versions.

 How this hits reality: One country trying this is an experiment. Five doing it is a standard forming. The age wall is becoming the internet's default setting, and the mechanics are the real story: to keep under-16s out, a platform has to check the age of everyone who walks in. A rule written for children quietly becomes verification for adults. The open, sign-up-and-go internet that defined two decades is being rebuilt as a space you have to prove your way into.

 Key takeaway: The debate sounds like it is about children, but the thing actually being built is an internet where nobody gets in without showing their age first.

DAILY TL;DR

- AMD acquired Mext to improve data-center memory optimization for AI workloads.
- PwC says UK AI hiring is surging as companies look for people to supervise and “babysit” bots.
- Accenture said consumer trust in AI shopping agents is rising as retail automation moves closer to checkout.
- Salesforce agreed to acquire AI customer-service platform Fin for $3.6 billion.
- Meta is testing an AI Mode for Facebook search that pulls from public posts across its platforms.
- Big Tech is making a late push to shape U.S. AI regulation before Congress locks in new rules.
- A US judge dismissed xAI’s trade secret lawsuit against OpenAI, finding no proof that OpenAI induced a former xAI engineer to leak Grok-related secrets.
- Microsoft was sued by shareholders who allege it hid slowing Azure growth and rising AI infrastructure costs before its post-earnings stock drop.

READ MORE

Let the Future Come to Your Inbox

Stay ahead without drowning in information. We turn the most important signals across AI, tech, marketing, and future products into 5-minute reads you can actually finish.

- AI Secret uncovers what really matters in AI
- Bay Area Letters decodes tech and business shifts from Silicon Valley
- Robotics Herald tracks how robots move from labs into daily life
- Marketing Secret breaks down real growth and go-to-market playbooks
- The Hardwire explores hardware, consumer tech, and what's coming next

Subscribe once stay ahead 🙌

TOGETHER WITH US

AI Secret Media Group is the world's #1 AI & Tech Newsletter Group, reaching over 2 million leaders across the global innovation ecosystem, from OpenAI, Anthropic, Google, and Microsoft to top AI labs, VCs, and fast-growing startups.

We've helped promote over 500 Tech Brands. Will yours be the next?

Reach out 👉

Email our co-founder Mark directly at mark@aisecret.us if the button fails.

More

More like this

Less

Less like this

KEEP READING

Claude Fable “Died” in Four Days

Plus: Loop Engineering Has Arrived, Token Capital Is Cope

Anthropic Is Midwifing a God

Plus: Gemini Plays the World Cup, Nuclear Cooling Comes for AI

Americans Fear AI Most

Plus: OpenAI Wants a Price War, AI Broke Our Lie Detector

AI Secret is the World's Top 1 AI Newsletter with 1.5 Million+ Members.
Learn how to leverage AI in your business and career before everyone else.
It's Free to subscribe.

16192 Coastal Highway
Lewes, Delaware 19958, United States.

AI Secret © 2026 – Unsubscribe